Shanghai, in China, is a busy city and more than 24 million people live there. People usually work very long hours and they often only have one day free each week. Some government offices, like banks and post offices, are open on Saturday and Sunday. Children go to school from Monday to Friday, but at the weekend they often learn other things like English, music or art. They have a lot of homework and don't have much free time to play or go to the park.

Some people in the city have a lot of money and there are a lot of very expensive shops. Some small shops close when there is a holiday, but some shops never close – they are open all day, every day.

Shanghainese people love their food. Lunchtime is usually at half past eleven or twelve o'clock, and dinner is at about six o'clock, but you can order food any time of the day or night. You can eat food from all over the world, and there are restaurants and coffee houses everywhere. The only thing you can't drink is the tap water. All the water is in bottles.

1. Government offices are always closed at the weekend.

2. Children don't go to school on Saturday or Sunday.

3. Some shops in Shanghai are always open.

4. You can only eat Chinese food.

5. The tap water in the city is not good to drink.
