Giving gifts can be difficult sometimes because it's hard to know what to give some people. Also, different countries have different gift-giving traditions.

In France, when you visit someone's house it is usual to give flowers or chocolates as a gift. In Russia, you must give an odd number of flowers because an even number is for when someone dies. In China, the person receiving the gift usually does not accept the gift at first. They say 'no' two or three times before they finally accept it. Also, if you receive a gift, it is common practice to give one back in return later. The number four is unlucky in China so don't give four of anything. If you give money, you should put it in a red envelope for good luck. In Japan, when you accept a gift, you do it with both hands. You should also not open the present in front of the person who gave it to you. Finally, the present should be nicely wrapped because this is very important.

1. In France, you do not need to give a gift when you go to a person's house.

2. In Russia, the number of flowers you give someone is important.

3. In China, people do not like to receive gifts.

4. In China, red is a lucky colour.

5. In Japan, you must accept a gift with two hands.

6. In Japan, you should always open a gift in front of the person who gave it to you.
