Life-changing decisions

Moira Shelley tells Hadley Johns about her decision to leave the job of her dreams to look after her children.

A

Most people wouldn't think twice about accepting the job they'd always wanted. However, while I was excited to be offered the role of marketing director for a startup, I'd just had my second child. I was torn between staying at home with my baby daughter and taking my career to the next level. As soon as I started my new job, though, I began to have second thoughts. I found myself working long hours and I'd get home feeling exhausted, usually just in time to say goodnight to the children. Not quite what I'd had in mind.

B

As any working parent knows, balancing a job and childcare is not easy. I've never been one to give up without a fight, so I swore to myself that I'd make it work. A few months later, my daughter got sick and I wanted to be with her. I asked my boss if I could work from home until she recovered but he seemed suspicious of my motives. After reminding me about my responsibilities to the company, he said he couldn't 'permit' me to work remotely. Nice people skills. I then realised the company didn't value me enough and my family meant more to me than my job.
I couldn't stay there any longer.

C

I was worried about how my husband would respond. He'd been pleased about the extra income as it made a big difference to our lives. Nevertheless, he was very understanding and encouraged me to resign. What surprised me most was how my parents reacted. They got very upset about me leaving. (Thanks for the support!) Looking back, they'd pressurised me to get a good job when I was a student, so they must have been disappointed. However, they left me alone when they saw I wasn't going to have a change of heart.

D

It wasn't an easy decision to make but now I've done it, I'm over the moon. Although we've got less money coming in, we don't need a babysitter anymore, which saves us a fortune. Dealing with two young children is probably more challenging than anything I've had to deal with at work. However, if I hadn't left my job, I wouldn't be spending so much time with them now.

E

The first thing I'd say is that it's not a decision you should make on impulse. Leaving your job means sacrificing something, like your income or your career. For that reason, you need to assess all possible outcomes before reaching a decision. Writing a list of pros and cons helps as well. Most importantly, you should then talk to your loved ones to get their opinion because it'll affect them as well. Nevertheless, be prepared for unexpected resistance because some of your family, as I found out myself, may not be on board with it.

6 Read an article in which three members of the same family talk about a social media app called Flip Flop. Tick [✓] the topics (1–4) that are mentioned and put a cross [x] beside those which are not.

0 Young people like Laura have few problems using new social media apps. _✓_

1 Laura describes a technique for ensuring the content of social media apps matches her interests. ___

2 Douglas had been informed by colleagues that Flip Flop might be difficult to use. ___

3 Sheila thinks it is strange that her videos have been viewed in different places. ___

4 Sheila feels that she has got to know herself better after spending time on Flip Flop. ___

___ / 4

Flip Flop

Three generations of the same family share their views on the new social media app which has been hitting the headlines.

LAURA (17) – student

I had no problems getting used to Flip Flop. People my age have grown up with social media apps like this, so it's instinctive to us. Not only is it straightforward to create videos, but there are also loads of cool tools for editing them. In terms of the videos, I was most inspired by the dance ones. If I were a good dancer, I might have made some of my own, but I'm not quite ready for that yet. It does make me want to learn how to dance properly, though. Apart from that, I was into the prank videos, where people play tricks on each other – some of them were very amusing. I was careful to like the things that I wanted to see more of because algorithms tend to use your likes to determine the content you'll see. That said, some videos in my feed were a bit off, like the beauty ones. I guess that happened as it knew I was a young woman, but I'm not at all interested in that. About half the time it generated content I found interesting, which is no better than other social media apps.

DOUGLAS (46) – advertising executive

I made the assumption it'd be easy to get used to Flip Flop because some of my colleagues had already started using it, but it was harder than I thought. I didn't have any issues making videos, but I couldn't figure out how to edit them with text and graphics. If Laura hadn't shown me how to do it, I think I'd still be trying to edit my first video! The strange thing was that political videos kept appearing in my feed. On the whole, it was people with pretty unacceptable views, which rubbed me up the wrong way a bit. What I did find strange was how the algorithm seemed to miscalculate my interests, like the political videos. Maybe it knows I read an online newspaper, but I'm inclined to avoid the politics section. Only when I started searching for cooking videos did the algorithm begin to understand my interests, but even then it seemed to be more effective to search for videos myself.

SHEILA (74) – retired

I thought Flip Flop would be far harder than it is, but there really isn't very much to it. Within a day or two I was making my own videos and getting likes from complete strangers. It's funny to think someone on the other side of the world is watching me showing off my dancing! Obviously, I enjoyed the dance videos and I even learnt some new moves. My favourite ones, though, were the so-called calming videos, which show things like rain falling on a lake or someone cutting into butter. I found them very relaxing. What I never knew though is that algorithms dictate what we see on social media. If I'm honest, it feels strange knowing that an algorithm is in charge of what we see. Sometimes it seemed to know me better than I know myself. For example, one day I was thinking, 'I want to learn how to dance salsa,' and the next thing, all these salsa videos started appearing. It was as though it had read my thoughts. Scary!

2 Douglas was annoyed about the behaviour of some people on Flip Flop. ___

3 Douglas has a different opinion to Sheila about the effectiveness of the Flip Flop algorithm. ___

4 Sheila and Laura were both able to learn a new skill from Flip Flop videos. ___
