A
This book had been sitting on a shelf gathering dust since I was in my twenties. My dad convinced me to get it, but, after only a few pages, I gave up. His enthusiasm for classic fiction never rubbed off on me! To be honest, the only reason I picked it up again was because I couldn't find anything else to read. Well, this time it didn't take me long to get stuck in. I was so desperate to find out what would happen next that I lost all track of time reading it. If only I'd read it before! #blownaway

B
My neighbour enticed me to join the book club with the promise of pleasant conversation and the best home-made cakes I'd ever tasted. She didn't mention books, but I guessed there'd be books as well. To be fair, I wasn't disappointed with the first one on the list, which I'd been meaning to read for a while. Having read a few chapters, I was enthusiastic about my first meeting and looking forward to the cake. However, by the end of it, I was kicking myself for signing up. Half the group were too humble to give their opinions, while the other half drove me up the wall with their endless speeches. But worst of all was a complete lack of cake!

C
Set on a remote Scottish island, the story is narrated by 11-year-old Isla. She has had a difficult childhood, her parents having separated years before. Isla has few friends and spends most of her time alone. The highlight of her week is when the ferry arrives from the mainland bringing sweets and news from the outside world. One day, she receives a piece of news which will change her life forever.

This book is skilfully written, both tragic and entertaining at the same time. It gives us a deeper understanding and appreciation of the difficulties of life on a small island. The author's attention to detail results in some beautiful descriptions of landscapes, which are extremely fulfilling to read.

It can be overwhelming when your teacher asks you to write a book review. Where do you begin? What do you include? How long should it be? Follow these points and you'll be able to produce a convincing book review without tearing your hair out.

First, give a brief description of what the book is about. Don't go into too much detail, just the characters, setting and plot. No matter what you do, don't give away too much information – you mustn't spoil it for your readers.

The next step is to give your personal opinion of the book. Remember that you're not trying to win over your readers. Your aim is to inform them, so be as honest as possible.

E
Collapsing under a tree, Mikal smiled to himself. The race had pushed him to his limits and he struggled for breath, but he was bursting with pride. His previous attempts seemed pathetic in comparison, but now he had found his true strength. It was the words of his coach which had motivated him to keep going, 'Reach inside yourself and you will find the power to achieve anything.' At first, the advice had been unconvincing. It was as if it had been borrowed from some Hollywood feel-good movie. Now, however, Mikal recognised how profound those words had been. They had helped him discover a force deep inside him, which he never knew existed.

F
Romance fiction is a big industry, said to be worth at least a billion dollars a year in the United States. It is every bit as important as the mystery and science-fiction genres, and significantly larger than many others. In fact, romance accounts for nearly a third of all sales of fictional works, being read by nearly 30 million people a year. While the vast majority of readers are women, 16 percent are male. Although read by people of all ages, it is most popular with people in their thirties and forties. Nearly half of all readers have a background in higher education. Fans of romance fiction tend to be eager readers, with 25 percent of them reading between 20 and 100 novels per year.

4 Read the extracts again. In which one (A–F) does the author …

1 explain which aspects of a book are satisfying for the reader? ___
