Our favourite childhood possessions

Readers tell us about the things they loved most when they were children.

KAI

According to an article in the paper, the most popular toys nowadays are video consoles and dolls. However, they aren't the things that give my kids most pleasure. For them, materials like an old shoe box or plastic lids from milk cartons are more fun and can be used for making pretend money, dolls' houses, or anything else they can imagine. I remember being exactly the same when I was growing up, and one of my favourite possessions was an old briefcase, which my dad had given me.

I recently read that briefcases are not very common anymore so if you don't know what a briefcase is, it's a small rectangular case for carrying documents. I don't think my dad ever used his briefcase for that. In fact, I don't think he carried anything in it except for his lunch. However, I'd always dreamt about having my own briefcase so I was excited when he gave it to me. It was made of leather, and it was a bit old and damaged. I used to imagine that I was a secret agent, like James Bond, and the briefcase contained all my secret agent's devices. The fact I could lock it up made it even more special to me. I'll never forget that briefcase!

KIMBERLY

Like most of my friends, I had all the typical girls' toys – dolls, a pretend kitchen, and a make-up set – but they weren't for me. I used to play with them for a few days before losing interest. Then, one day, on a trip to my grandmother's house, I was given a box of old toy cars. She'd found them when she was tidying up one of her bedrooms. She hadn't planned to give them to me because she thought they were for boys. However, she didn't have anything else for me to play with.

Apparently, they'd belonged to my father when he was growing up. Although they were probably 30 years old, most of them were in good condition. A lot of toys are plastic nowadays, but those ones were metal. I think that's why they'd lasted so long. I spent hours inventing stories with them, usually ending with crazy car chases. I've still got that box under my bed and I'm looking forward to giving it to my son. He's too young at the moment, but I know he'll enjoy them as much as I did.

A His toys didn't give him pleasure.	B He liked to create his own games.

1 What does Kai say about the briefcase?

A His father only used to carry his lunch in it.	B He thinks that it was in perfect condition.

2 How did Kimberly feel about most of her toys?

A She didn't appreciate the typical girls' toys.	B She didn't have the same toys as her friends.

3 Why did Kimberley's grandmother give her a box of toy cars?

A She wanted to tidy up the room they were in.	B She had no other toys for Kimberly to play with.

4 What does Kimberly say about the toy cars in the last paragraph?

A She is excited about sharing them with her son.	B She and her father played with them together.

How to become more confident

By Phillip Drew

[1]I've been giving workshops and presentations about how to become more confident for the last five years. I always start by telling people, 'I used to be the least confident person in the world,' which surprises them because that's not how I appear. However, the truth is that I used to struggle with social situations, thinking something bad would happen. I'm going to tell you how I became more confident and how you can, too.

[2]Firstly, when I was growing up, I was always comparing myself to others. I worried about my appearance and thought other kids had nicer clothes. I tried to copy what they were wearing, but I never felt comfortable. After a while, I realised that copying them was making me unhappy. That's why my advice is to not copy others, whether it's wearing the same clothes, having the same hobbies or doing the same jobs. You need to tell yourself, 'I don't want to be like anyone else, I just want to be me.'

[3]The problem with trying to 'be me' is that sometimes you don't know who you are. If you care too much about other's opinions, you don't always realise what's important to you. That's why I'd suggest making a list of the things that mean a lot to you. I don't mean lists of possessions, but behaviour, such as, 'I think it's important to be kind and honest.'

© 2023 Pearson PHOTOCOPIABLE

By doing that, you will get to know yourself better and understand what behaviour you're most comfortable with.

[4]Another reason you might not feel confident is if you're afraid of not achieving your goals. I used to put off doing difficult tasks because I was worried about making mistakes. One day, I realised that if I didn't face my fear, I'd never become more confident. I'm not saying it's easy, but you need to set yourself goals and stick to them. Tell yourself, 'I'm not going to give up and it's going to make me more confident in future.'

[5]The wonderful thing about becoming more confident is that you'll feel better about yourself in different ways. You'll have healthier relationships, you'll know yourself better and you'll learn to do things that you thought were impossible. You'll still get nervous from time to time, but it won't stop you from achieving your goals. So just tell yourself, 'I'm ready to do this. I'm going to become more confident and take control of my life.'

7 Read the text again. Are the statements True (T) or False (F)?

0 The writer has always felt confident in social situations. _F_

1 The writer recommends not doing the same things as other people. ___

2 The writer suggests making a list of things you would like to own. ___

3 The writer did not want to do things because he was worried about the results. ___

4 The writer says that being more confident has different advantages. ___

To: Matt
Subject: Cinema

Hi Matt,

What are you doing on Friday night? There's a film I want to see at the cinema. It's that new French film you were talking about. If you can't go on Friday, maybe we can find another day. Let me know as soon as you can.

To: Liam Bradley
Subject: Work trip

Dear Liam,

We're pleased to announce that we're organising another work trip this year. It'll be a great opportunity to spend time with your colleagues in a relaxed setting. We're planning to organise the trip on the first weekend of June. However, if you're unable to attend then, please let me know as soon as possible. We may be able to change the date if it's not convenient for everyone.

Regards,
Sonia Heath, HR Manager
