The Cardiff Giant

In 1867, George Hull came up with a scheme to convince people that giants had once walked the earth. Hull was an American cigar maker who had had an argument with a group of people who believed that giants once existed. He intended to show them, and everyone else, how easily people could be deceived. His plan was to create a fake giant which had been turned into stone, and he was going to show it to the world.

Hull made careful plans and he started by buying a large piece of soft stone, which he transported to Chicago. Then he employed sculptors to create a three-metre giant man from the stone. He made the sculptors promise to keep it a secret. They thought it would be a good idea to use chemicals to make the giant look old, and Hull even made small holes in it to make the 'skin' look more natural. When the giant was finally ready, Hull arranged for it to be buried on the farm of his cousin, William Newell.

The giant remained underground for a year before Newell hired two men to dig a well in the same place. The two men had no idea about Hull and Newell's scheme so they were amazed to discover the giant. The announcement of the discovery was made in local newspapers and people were soon rushing to the farm to see the giant. Newell, who was happy to live the lie, put up a tent to protect the giant, and charged visitors fifty cents to see the dramatic discovery. He shared the profits with Hull.

While many people were deceived by Hull's hoax, others doubted that the Cardiff Giant was genuine. They argued that it was impossible for the giant to keep its features after a long time in the ground. Perhaps realising that the truth was going to come out, Hull sold his share of the giant for $30,000. The circus owner P.T. Barnum had been interested in buying the giant. However, when the owners refused to sell it to him, he created his own fake giant. Barnum told everyone that Hull's giant was the fake and then charged people to see his 'real' giant!

Some people continued to believe the story of the Cardiff Giant until 1870 when the sculptors decided to come clean. Hull then also decided to break his silence and he spoke publicly about his dishonest scheme. When the truth came out, interest in the giant disappeared and its owners stopped displaying it. In 1947, the Cardiff Giant was eventually sold to the Farmers' Museum in Cooperstown, New York, where it attracts visitors once again.

4 Read the story again. Are the statements True (T) or False (F)?

1 Hull wanted to show people that giants had really existed. T / F
2 Hull bought the stone for the Cardiff Giant in Chicago. T / F
3 The sculptors agreed not to tell anyone about the giant. T / F
4 Newell was comfortable deceiving the giant's visitors. T / F
5 Hull sold his share of the giant after telling people the truth. T / F
6 Barnum had intended to buy the Cardiff Giant from its owners. T / F
7 Hull was the first person to tell the truth about the Cardiff Giant. T / F
