A challenging journey

Janet Moreland grew up in California, where her hobbies included skiing and windsurfing. When she later moved to inland Missouri, she looked for another outdoor sport which didn't involve the sea. The Missouri River passed through her town so she decided to take up kayaking. A kayak is a small boat for one or two people, which is ideal for travelling along rivers. One day, Janet met a travel writer who made her think about travelling the whole Missouri River in a kayak. The river is around 3,700 kilometres in length!

One reason Janet took up the challenge is that she wanted to be the first woman to kayak the whole River Missouri. It is the longest river in North America and the fourth longest in the world, so it would be tough. Another reason is that she wanted to set a positive example for young people. Janet was a teacher and she wanted to show her students that you can do anything if you try hard enough.

There isn't much space in a kayak so Janet was planning to travel light. She took dry food, a tent to sleep in, and a new tablet in order to write her blog. Once she was ready, she set out on the 1,950-kilometre road trip to get to the starting point of her expedition. She knew she would face difficulties on the river, such as high winds, but she hadn't expected any problems on the road trip. However, her car broke down on the way and she later had to sleep in it during a snowstorm.

In case the kayak trip wasn't challenging enough, Janet had also planned a mini adventure before going out on the water. It involved skiing for 31 hours and then cycling 150 kilometres in order to get to the river. By the time she arrived, she'd already hurt her head while she was skiing! She didn't give up, though, and she was soon ready to start her kayak trip. The first few days were tough because she got holes in her kayak and she hurt her wrist. However, she carried on and spent the next four months kayaking down the Missouri.

Although she got into hot water a few times, including camping out in an electrical storm, Janet enjoyed her journey. In fact, she enjoyed it so much that she decided to carry on – this time along the Mississippi River – until she reached the sea. After taking just a week off to get her boat repaired and take on more supplies, she set off again. In December 2013, she finally ran out of river and reached the sea in the Gulf of Mexico. Janet had kayaked more than 5,000 kilometres.

4 Read the article again. Are the statements True (T) or False (F)?

1 Janet had tried kayaking when she lived in California. T / F
2 Janet decided to make her journey after talking to someone. T / F
3 The Missouri River is longer than the other rivers in the United States. T / F
4 Janet wanted to encourage young people to try new things. T / F
5 Janet was able to take a lot of things on her kayak. T / F
6 Janet was unable to drive her car because of high winds. T / F
7 Janet injured her head while she was kayaking. T / F
8 There were several difficulties during the first few days on the river. T / F
9 Janet repaired her boat herself when she stopped before continuing down the Mississippi. T / F
10 The trip was much longer than Janet had planned. T / F
