MAN AND MACHINE

BY MARK RAVENS

Science and technology have developed a lot since the fifteenth century, when the artist Leonardo da Vinci drew mechanical figures that looked like men – the first known robot designs. Now, of course, robots are everywhere, from factories to space stations, and they safely carry out all sorts of tasks, from cutting the grass to performing surgery. However, until recently most of them haven't looked like humans at all, as Leonardo imagined, and they certainly haven't had feelings. But now all that is beginning to change.

Imagine a world in which robots not only look like us but also know our moods, and have feelings themselves. It might even be possible for robots to become our friends! Science fiction writers have written about a world just like that for many years, and scientists are now predicting that intelligent robots like these will exist quite soon. In fact, they've already produced one that recognizes sound, movement and touch. Its bright red heart, which you can see through its plastic body, beats faster if you are rough, with the robot, or shout at it. But its heart slows down if you are gentle with it. Although it can't talk, it's easy to believe the robot actually has feelings!

It's true that so far 'human' robots do not really move, talk or respond in the way we humans do, but they are becoming more advanced all the time. At some point in the future, a robot will definitely be created that may not look like us, but will be capable of doing anything that we can. And then we will truly be in the world of science fiction stories!

1 Mark says that when da Vinci drew some robots, he
A copied earlier work from someone else.
B made them look like real people.
C also built the robots he'd designed.

2 Mark says that robots nowadays
A can already do a wide range of tasks.
B are better at simple tasks than difficult ones.
C don't seem safe in some of the jobs they do.

3 In the second paragraph, Mark says that
A it will not be long before robots develop feelings.
B science fiction writers were wrong about robots.
C he can't imagine having a robot as a friend.

4 How does Mark describe one robot that already exists?
A It can have a conversation.
B It understands what you're feeling.
C It knows what's going on around it.

5 Mark thinks that in the future, robots will
A look just like we do.
B be more advanced than we are.
C do all the things that we do.

TEEN TYCOON

BY SARAH MARSH

Have you ever bought something on the Internet that wasn't new? (1) _____ However, if it's something expensive, like a car or a computer, it's a good idea to see it first. That will ensure you don't make a mistake that will cost you money.

Of course, some people get things from the Internet that they don't need to pay for! One person who has got second-hand things online is teenager Steven Ortiz, from the US. (2) _____ So how did he do it? With patient and clever use of a website he discovered, which advertises items that people want to exchange for something else. The whole process took him two years.

It all started when Steven was given an old mobile phone by a friend. (3) _____ Next came several bikes, a laptop and then a series of cars. With the fourteenth exchange, he ended up with a Porsche – a very expensive sports car. Luckily, by then he was old enough to drive it!

The story may sound too good to be true, but in fact, Steven isn't the first person to do something like this. In 2005, Kyle MacDonald was in the news when he started with a small red paperclip, and ended up with an entire house. He did this in only fourteen moves. (4) _____ Followers contacted him with offers of items to exchange, and altogether the process took him a year.

Steven and Kyle have both become celebrities in their home countries since sharing their stories. (5) _____ On the other hand, Steven is planning to sell his Porshce. He is thinking of buying a car that is less expensive to repair.
