Sample answer

My post today is about the place where I spent my childhood. My mum is Polish and my dad comes from Turkey. Now I live in Istanbul, but I grew up in the centre of Łódź, a city in the heart of Poland. Our flat was situated on the ground floor of an old block of flats. It had two bedrooms and a cosy living room.

The house was located near the main square of the city. There were many shops, restaurants and a big park in my neighbourhood. There was also a swimming pool. I was never bored there. There were plenty of attractions within walking distance.

Near our flat there was a big historic building, the palace of a rich factory owner. It was very popular with tourists. It was full of old furniture and it had a collection of old photos of our city. Another place worth visiting was the main square. It was usually crowded but I liked spending my free time there.

I was very happy in that flat. I remember I had a lot of friends and we spent our free time in the nearby park together. In summer we played football there and in winter we went sledding because there was a small hill in the centre of the park. I miss those days very much!
