TRAVELLING IN HOT COUNTRIES

Every year, we hear stories about how a dream holiday turns into a nightmare because people don't follow some simple rules when visiting hot countries. The main problem people have is dehydration – not drinking enough fluids. Water is the best thing to drink in hot places, and make sure it's bottled water, not from the tap. Avoid alcohol and hot drinks as these can dehydrate you even more. Check with your doctor if you need some injections before you travel. Tell them which country you are going to visit and they will know which ones to give you. Finally, don't try and do too much! Being very active, especially if you are in the sun a lot, can lead to heat exhaustion and sunstroke.

JOURNEY BACK IN TIME

I was recently lucky enough to visit the temples of Angkor, in Cambodia, and what an experience it was! The most famous temple, Angkor Wat, is huge. It's nearly 1 km long! And the sculptures are incredible. What I loved most, though, was the way that nature has grown in and around the temples. One temple has been pulled to pieces by the roots and branches of the trees – it looked awesome! There were bright green parrots flying around in the jungle and all sorts of insects and spiders. If you get the chance, GO!
