Three girls talk about buildings in their cities

Kamila

The centre of my city has lots of tall new buildings, but they're mainly for companies to work in. And when they were built, many older buildings were lost, and I actually liked those better. In my opinion, the new ones don't look very special. They're just grey and boring. And if you go to the top, all you see is lots more tall buildings. However, at night, when all the lights are on inside, some don't look quite so bad!

Sophie

There are a few old houses near the centre of my city. They were the homes of well-known writers and artists many years ago, so it's interesting to visit them. And you can see a long way from the windows in my favourite one, because it's by the river. There are modern buildings in my city too, over 30 floors high, and they're also fun to visit. But you can't go in and look around the ones that belong to businesses, so that's a bit boring!

Corinne

There are still many old buildings in the centre of my city, and some are quite important because famous people lived there. There are lots more company buildings now too, and some are really high. So, it's fun to go in the lift, right up to the roof! But some of the newer buildings look quite strange from the outside. I guess the people who built them wanted them to look different, but I think they're quite ugly.

Questions 14 – 18

For each question, choose the correct answer.

Cycling in the snow

By Nick Jones, age 11

It usually snows once or twice in my town during the winter and the snow can bring problems. Everyone works to get the snow off the roads, so traffic keeps moving. But that doesn't always happen on the paths, so going anywhere on foot is difficult. But the local trains still keep going – so until last year, that's how I travelled to school on snowy days.

Then when it snowed last winter, I decided to cycle to school instead. It was easier than I thought because the roads weren't busy, and I never felt in danger. But people in my class couldn't believe it – they all came in cars!

Of course, I had to prepare for the trip. Luckily, I already had a warm jacket and trousers to wear. I also put special snow tyres on my bike – with some help from Dad! But he wasn't worried about me cycling in the snow – he knows I'm careful on my bike, even in good weather.

But sometimes bad things still happen. One day, I was cycling home when I saw another cyclist hit a tree. He wasn't hurt, but I was so busy watching him, I suddenly found I was on the ground! I was worried about my bike's front wheel, but it was OK.

You can still cycle quickly in the snow, but remember you'll need to use your feet to stop! And if there's ice, don't cycle on it as it's very difficult to stay on your bike!
